

Five Celebratory Sparklers, From Parties to Proposals

Jeanne O'Brien Coffey
CONTRIBUTOR

Eat, drink, and be adventurous. Savvy tips in food and travel.

Sure, it's easy to reach for Champagne when there's something to celebrate. But there is a wide world of sparkling wines out there, from Spanish Cava to Italian Prosecco to a number of domestic U.S. producers crafting interesting bubbles. Here are five of my favorites, just in time to pop a cork for New Years Eve.

Torresella Prosecco ($14.99)

Guests will think you spent a lot more if you offer this traditional sparkler from the Veneto at your next party. Made of Glera grapes using environmentally sustainable practices, it is surprisingly complex and crisp, slightly yeasty and fruity, but bone dry.

This elegant sparkler tastes expensive, but it's not